New Population Health Sciences lecture series

Our experts are tackling the critical health issues of our time. To showcase this vital work, we've launched an exciting new lecture series featuring world-leading researchers from across the Faculty to examine and interrogate a range of urgent health challenges. Over the coming month, we'll be bringing you a series virtual events focusing on a range of topics from COVID-19, to the gender health gap, to vaccines and immunisation. Join the conversation.

Your online induction - Connected learning

While social distancing continues there will be limited opportunities to offer face-to-face teaching and learning in its most familiar forms. The Connected Learning at UCL course, explores our approach to ensuring your online learning is active, collaborative, and enjoyable, and offers a practical opportunity for both new and returning students to experience an online course before the new term begins. Get started!
